

TRENT UNIVERSITY REPORT TO THE COMMUNITY

"Trent University is deeply embedded in Peterborough in so many ways. In addition to our many academic partnerships, Trent's students, faculty and staff lend their time and talents to a whole host of organizations, groups and issues that affect our daily lives. Whether on campus, or in the community, we're proud to work together to help make Peterborough exceptional. In the latest edition of the 2017/18 Community Report, I'm pleased to share a few highlights of this vital relationship." – Julie Davis, Vice President, External Relations & Advancement

Community Leadership Award Winners

Each year, Trent recognizes one staff and one faculty member who enhance the quality of life in this region through their volunteerism and community involvement. Meet our 2017 recipients:

"Volunteering with inspiring community projects allows me the opportunity to meet and work with like-minded people. From creating community gardens to leading two volunteer support teams for newcomer families from Syria and Eritrea, volunteering has been influential and life-changing. I believe that people are all equal, no matter where we were born and everyone deserves the right to a safe place to call home. I'm very fortunate to live in this wonderful community, devoting my time and skills to initiatives that make the area a better and more inclusive place for everyone."

Laurie Collette, administrative coordinator, Trent Centre for Teaching & Learning

"I've always known how privileged I am to spend my days working at Trent University. Watching and working with socially engaged colleagues has helped me understand the community responsibilities that come with my role at Trent. I have learned so much volunteering with different groups, from GreenUp to Sustainable Peterborough, and it's made me a better professor and person."

Dr. Stephen Hill, associate professor, Trent School of the Environment
